A MEMORIAL BUILDING

A SUGGESTION FOR THE POSSIBLE ERECTION OF A BUILDING TO BE DEVOTED TO HISTORICAL USES.

The Historical Society is now seven years old and it has long since outgrown its present quarters. The collection which numbers over eighteen thousand separate articles should be better housed and the meetings of the Society, which almost invariably pack the present room, should be held in a modern lecture hall. A fire-proof building provided with ample space for the exhibition and preservation of the valuable collection which is being made by the Society and with a hall to seat approximately two hundred and fifty people in which meetings could be held would be a great addition to the town.

This is an opportunity for some of our wealthy citizens to consider seriously. The one who provides the funds for such a building will be doing the general public a real service. The building would, as a matter of course, be named for the one who makes its erection possible and future generations will have cause to look with pride upon the memorial.

The Memorial would be as fine a monument as any man or woman could have. It would be completed for approximately $5000 and the generous donor would have reason to feel proud of the fact that the family name would always be revered by the people of this district. With the single exception of the Niagara Historical Society's building this would be the only one in the Province of Ontario devoted to such a worthy cause and with the possible exception of the same Niagara district no part of the Province has such valuable historical material to preserve and exhibit.

Let our wealthy men think seriously of this suggestion and may the Memorial be built during the coming summer.

"Historical."

HISTORICAL MEETING.

The meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society last Friday was one of the most successful ever held by the local organization. An audience which packed the hall listened with keenest attention to a lecture on "Venice" delivered by Prof. W. L. Grant, of Queen's University, Kingston. Prof. Grant opened his subject with a carefully prepared history of the origin of Venice. He explained why the particular location was selected by the first settlers, who these settlers were, and how they built up a city which at the height of its glory was one of the most beautiful, the richest and the greatest trading centre in the world. He then described the manner in which the

The artistic note is strongly pronounced in most of the hats and there are very few, if any, shapes which are too extreme to be generally becoming and to appeal to the taste of the most discriminating wearer.

He then described the manner in which the city was built and how it was govern- ed. The causes for its decline in im- portance were most interestingly told by Professor Grant and with these he closed the first part of his lecture. The lantern views of Venice which were then displayed illustrated in a delightful way many scenes in the city by the sea. Those of the canals, the public buildings, churches and works of art were splendid examples of the photographers art, while the prize of the collection, the home of Shakespeare's great heroine, Desdemona, received from the audience the hearty applause which it justly de- served. The whole lecture was de- livered in a most finished manner. This combined with Professor Grant's delightful English made the evening one to be long and pleasantly remem- bered. The next meeting was an- nounced for Friday evening, April 24th, When Dr. George H. Locke, Librarian of the Toronto Public Library, will deliver a lecture on "A Librarian's Hobby." Votes For Women Not Elected by Majority, Says I

Provincial Treasurer, Speaks the Government on Elliott's Bill, Says Most Are Indifferent in the Debate Is Adjourned — Close Bars on Saturday

TORONTO, March 31. — the debate was adjourned division was taken yesterday Elliott's bill granting a man suffrage to women in municipalities will be defeated when up for a vote. Speaking for the Government the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. I. B. Lucas, said the not yet ripe for such legislation cause the women, who are chiefly interested, were not their demand for it. In fact the majority were either indifferent.

Mr. Rowell maintained though there might be a difference of opinion regarding women's suffrage in national politics, there was none with regard to the value for women in municipal affairs principle was accepted in Britain in most leading countries.

Resuming the adjourned Mr. Elliott's bill to extend to married women property Mr. Rowell demanded of the Government a statement of its position.

Hon. I. B. Lucas, in reply, in the world's history the franchise extension to a class had never been opposed by that class. This was not the case with this proposal, for a great many men were out against the vote. If women were included it would be a great mistake to put them on them, for a Government know that any new electors would be added to the full respect of citizenship. It was not a matter of class or sex, because there was no clashing interests between men and the women of this he declared. He disputed the contention that equal franchise would bring equal salaries, not done so in the U. S.

As to the effect of woman on temperance, Mr. Lucas stated. There was only one union where prohibition force and where women vote, and even there prohibition carried twenty years before woman went to the polls. It had not come when any good would be performed by extension of franchise. The next point was that the majority of the province did not want the privilege. They had not decided it.

Sam Clarke (Lib., W. L. Berkeley) declared that the effect of equalization of wages had to do with the matter, and Lucas was simply dodging the issue. If such a privilege was the interests of the state, it was not permitted, but what was it that could be contrary interests? As far as he was concerned the bill did not go far enough. He had his way he would give woman of the age of 21 years British subject full power to the franchise.

Mr. Rowell followed. He

Mr. Rowell followed. He regretted that the Government had not fit to take a step in view of the spread favor in which women franchise was held.

"The Government," he said, "made up its mind," he said, "this and all other bills of a character." He went on to point out that the bill did not affect the parliamentary franchise but only municipal one, and he did not think that women themselves oppose Mr. Lucas had intimated. In the same privilege was granted ago, and women were even elected to hold municipal offices. It was wrong and misleading to say that women had objected to give a municipal vote for contrary direct requests had made. Mr. Rowell referred votes in Toronto, Ottawa and cities, and concluded with an appeal based on the advocacy of women advanced legislation along the line, housing reform and humanitarian lines.

TAKES SEELY'S OFFICE

Premier Asquith Will Go to Constituents For Re-Election.

Latest Surprise In British Crisis
Comes When the Prime Minister
Accepts War Secretary's Resignation and Takes Portfolio Himself
—House Will Be Technically
Without a Leader for Two Weeks.

LONDON, March 31.—A series of sensations in the House of Commons
yesterday in connection with the army crisis reached its climax with the announcement by Premier Asquith that he himself would assume
the portfolio of Secretary of War, vacated by Col. Seely. He added that he would retire from the House of Commons until his constituents in East Fife re-elected him.

Field Marshal Sir John French,
chief of the Imperial general staff,
and Gen. Sir John Ewart, adjutant-general, declined to withdraw their resignations in lte of the army order issued on Friday, while Viscount Haldane cleverly framed as a platform on which the ge erals might stand with consistency and honor.

It thus became impossible for Col.
J. E. B. Seely, who was co-signer
with them of the assurances t Brig-
Gen. Gough that the army would not be used to suppress the Ulster opposition to Home Rule, to retain the Secretaryship of War. His resignation, therefore, was accepted, after he had been for some days under fire from
the newspapers of his own party,
which insisted that he must go.

Viscount Morley of Blackburn, Lord President of the Council, who was partner with Col. Seely in drafting the offending paragraphs of the document, stands in the same position, and his withdrawal from office
is expected to-day.

The Premier's absence from Parliament will not last longer than two weeks, as his re-election for the Scottish division he has represented ever since he entered Parliament is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The decision of the Premier was wholly unexpected and momentarily
overshadowed the retirement of Col.
Seely. Field Marshal French and Adjutant-General Ewart. Politicians were brought back to the original cause of the Ministerial crisis by the admissions of Viscount Morley in the House of Lords, which confirmed
many of the Unionist charges and the intimation that Viscount Morley himself intended to retire from politics.

"Col. Seely's resignation has been accepted." This was the euphemistic expression by Premier Asquith in announcing that his War Secretary had paid the penalty of his indiscretions
in adding to the Cabinet document
the two paragraphs which have aroused such feeling as threaten the existence of the entire Cabinet.

The first intimation received by members of Parliament that Col.
Seely had definitely retired from the Cabinet was when he entered the House and took a seat in the back benches instead of among his late colleagues.

The only practical loss to the party
meantime will be the withdrawal of
Mr. Asquith's voice from the debates.
He will preside over the Cabinet
meetings and direct manoeuvres in the House of Commons from an unofficial seat, while Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, and Winston

Ottawa Citizens Defeat Binnie's Plan
After Bitter Contest.

OTTAWA, March 31.—After one
of the most bitterly contested municipal battles in many years—a pure water supply for the capital being the issue—when ratepayers flocked to the polls yesterday and gave the project
to mechanically filter Ottawa river water, at an approximate cost of $2,000,000, a majority of 1,308. In opposition to this plan was a scheme
to take the water from Thirty-One Mile Lake, via a pipe line fifty-two miles long, at an estimated expenditure of $8,000,000. This latter scheme was reported on by Sir Alex.
Binnie, an eminent British engineer,
and the victorious project was recommended by Mayor McVeity and reported on by Archibald Currie, city
engineer of Ottawa.

A majority of the council, led by Ald. Ellis, M.P.P. for West Ottawa,
and mayor in 1913, who was defeated
for re-election, opposed the mechanical filtration scheme, supported by The Ottawa Free Press and The Evening Journal. The Ottawa Citizen joined forces with the minority in council, and for the past few weeks a warm fight has raged.

At one time the question went to the Ontario Legislature, which finally had to decide on the wording of colleagues. The only practical loss to the party meantime will be the withdrawal of Mr. Asquith's voice from the debates. He will preside over the Cabinet meetings and direct manoeuvres in the House of Commons from an unofficial seat, while Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, and Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, will understudy him as House leader.

"Oh, I'll be handy if I'm wanted," Mr. Asquith remarked to Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, who thought that the Home Rule bill could not be proceeded with in the absence of the Premier.

Mr. Asquith apparently consulted no one except the King before his bold decision. His colleagues in the Cabinet seemed to be as surprised as the other members of the House when he revealed his plans. Mr. Asquith is already First Lord of the Treasury, which office he will continue to hold. If he had merely shifted from one office to another the resignation of his seat in the House of Commons would not have been necessary, but he said that he had been legally advised that the acceptance of "an office of profit under the crown," in the words of the "statute necessitated a new election, although he will take only one salary, $25,000.

Both Houses yesterday debated the situation at great length, but the debates simmered down into merely assertions, on the one side of a plot to seduce the army, and on the other side of a plot to crush the Ulster covenanters, with denials and counter-denials and heated personalities.

Anderson (Bruce) and R. J. Dick (Lambton) also spoke.

RESENTS INSULT.

President Wilson Sorry Tolls Debate Has Degenerated.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—On the eve of the vote in the House of Representatives on the repeal of the American toll exemption in the Panama Canal, Congress yesterday was completely absorbed in the controversy, verbal artillery thundering throughout the day in both House and Senate.

While opposing forces were clashing in oratorical flights at the capitol, President Wilson took occasion to discuss the all-engrossing situation with callers, expressing keen regret that what had promised to be a dignified contest over principles had degenerated into a fight upon the administration. While on the subject, President Wilson characterized as "a crowning insult of a number of insults" in the debate, the declaration of Representative Knowland of California, that the administration had made a deal to repeal the toll exemption with Sir William Terrill, secretary of Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Little doubt as to the result of the vote on the bill is entertained by any one, the majority for the repeal being variously estimated at from 30 to 75 votes.

Jewel had trouble with his wife, and attempted to commit suicide by gas and acid, but failed. He was in a local hospital for several days, and after his release went to Walkerville.

He came back here on the evening of Feb. 19 and set fire to the house where his wife was living with her parents. He was tracked through the snow by officers and arrested on a C. P. K. express just as it was leaving the city for Windsor.

Mrs. Rolinson declared her husband tied her and their infant baby to a chair and threatened to set both on fire if she attempted to free herself. Rolinson admitted the charges.

"I was so angry I lost all control of myself," said Rolinson when he was brought in. "It is purely a case of too much mother-in-law. My wife and I could be happy if her mother would leave her alone."

The passenger Zeppelin "Hansa," which also flew over Berlin during the day, gave the usual sound of its approach miles away through the rumble of its engines and propellers. All this is done away with in the newest army and navy "Zeppelins," which as newspapers proudly proclaim, henceforth will be able to sail through misty or foggy skies without themselves giving warning to the enemy that Dreadnoughts of the air are coming.

THE TABLES ARE TURNED

GOVERNMENT FORCES NOW ENDEAVORING TO APOLOGIZE FOR AND DEFEND THE REPORT OF PARTISANS FOR PARTY PURPOSES.

The Government is now on the defensive in regard to the Gutelius-Lynch-Staunton report on the National Transcontinental railway. On the Government now rests the responsibility of justifying the appointment of its partisan investigators, of endorsing the misstatements and libels of that report on the Liberal party, on the people of Canada and on a great national undertaking, and of remedying as far as possible, the grave injury which has been done to the credit of Canada to the credit of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, and to the whole object of Parliament, as twice endorsed by the electors of Canada, in building the finest transcontinental railway on the continent with a view to lowering freight rates between the east and west and of developing Canada's national ports on the Atlantic.

That is now the situation in the Commons as a result of Hon. George P. Graham's complete and exhaustive analysis of the Gutelius-Lynch-Staunton report on Tuesday and Wednesday last in the House. When he concluded his seven hour summing up of the whole situation with an appeal to the Premier and to his colleagues to rise above mere matters of party politics and serve the interests of the people of Canada rather than party or private interests, everyone who had heard him realized that it was not the Liberal party that was on the defensive, but the men who had inspired the attack.

No report of a Royal Commission has ever been subjected to such a fire of substantiated criticism. Mr. Graham convicted the Commissioners and the Government out of their own

general financial interests of the country were emphasized in all their seriousness. Already the effect had been to discredit Canadian undertakings in Great Britain at a time of serious financial stringency in Canada. One direct result had been to seriously jeopardize Grand Trunk financing. Mr. Graham gave the true statement of the situation. The official documents on file in the National Transcontinental commission office, prepared by the best railway experts available, show that the capital cost of the line from Moncton to Prince Rupert is less than that of the main line of the C.P.R. The people of Canada have contributed more to the C.P.R. than they have contributed to the new road. In the latter line they have a vested interest from which they will get direct dividends and they have a road of a higher standard of construction. Even allowing outside figures of cost and inside estimates of revenue for the new line the official estimates indicate that the road will pay interest on the cost of construction and leave a good margin of profit in addition to the Grand Trunk Pacific. As compared with this, there is the Government's effort to lower the standard of construction on the whole line between Moncton and Winnipeg. Mr. Graham gave in detail dozens of cases where grades have been increased, sometimes without effecting a cent in saving in cost of construction. He noted that formal protest had been entered by the Grand Trunk Pacific against this de-grading, and that warning had been given that the company would not take over the road unless the bargain made by Parliament and twice endorsed by the people, was adhered to.

This is the most serious part of the whole business, for it is only by maintaining minimum grades and by the elimination of sharp curves that the hauling capacity of the road can be doubled as compared with competing lines and the real object of reducing freight rates and carrying the western export traffic through to Canadian ports can be attained. This is the real issue now before the people. Unless they insist upon the Government forgetting its alliance with the C.P.R. and restoring the standard of construction to what Parliament and the people of Canada intended it to be, a great national crime will be committed. The effect of Mr. Graham's criticisms of the report and of his vindication of the Laurier Government's policy in regard to the high standard of the construction of the road was quickly evidenced in the way the succeeding Government speakers side-stepped, as far as possible, the statements of alleged facts made by dollars were involved he didn't bother to ask for tenders and then award the contract to the lowest tenderers. He simply gave one particular company a fine chance to make a fine fat profit from the public treasury.

Mr. Rogers didn't even trouble to make the company name a price for the job. Instead he entered into an arrangement under which the work is done on "force account." The beauty of this arrangement—from the company's point of view at all events—is more clearly seen when it is realized just what is meant by "force account." When "force account" is the system followed by any instruction work, the man or company having the job in hand is paid the cost of the undertaking plus a fixed percentage of that cost. No special keenness of mind is required to see that, under such a plan, the more the job costs the bigger the profits of the contractor. Every extra dollar spent through the employment of men means extra profit. It is a fine method for the contractor, but not always so fine for the people who have to pay the cost plus the contractor's profit.

In this particular case the Foundation Company's profit is twelve and a half per cent. Already, according to Mr. Rogers' statement in the Commons a few days ago, a half a million dollars of public money has been spent and the foundations are not yet completed. The Foundation Company, which was given the job without tender, goes on drawing its fine fat percentage of profit.

THAT HYPHENATED REPORT.

HON. GEORGE P. GRAHAM SUMS UP THE CASE AGAINST THE GUTELIUS-LYNCH-STAUTON PRODUCTION.

Hon. George P. Graham in his great speech in the Commons on the Gutelius-Lynch-Staunton report, thus summed up the salient features and the underlying motives of that "national crime":—

"This so-called report of the Commissioners appointed by the Government, is not a report in the proper sense of the term. It is a compilation of partisan views, prepared by partisans for party purposes. It begins with an attack on the late Liberal Government and ends with a criticism of the Government, of Parliament and of the people of Canada, and another attack on the Grand Trunk Pacific. That is the Genesis and Revelation of this report. From one end to the other, I say, knowing the responsibility of my words, there is not one line that breathes an independent consideration or judicial finding. It is for the most part, regardless of the law, regardless of the facts, regardless of railway practice, and in many cases absolutely regardless of common business acumen. These gentlemen had their minds absolutely made up before they took the position. From a party point of view, Mr. Lynch-Staunton's mind was absolutely made up before he was appointed Commissioner, and everybody knows that the evidence that he sought was for the purpose of substantiating the preconceived views he had on the matter.

The other Commissioner was borrowed, as the acting minister of Railways and canals told us,—only borrowed—a call loan—from one of the big railway companies of Canada. Coming from that centre, Mr. Gutelius was imbued with the idea that the idea that the entire project was wrong and particularly was it wrong to build this road to the high standard at which it had been started. From the moment that the Minister of Railways and canals began to take his advice, the standard of the Grand Trunk Pacific began to be lowered. I say

EGG STANDARDS.

List of Trade Designations Ages Corresponding.

With the high price of th new-laid egg comes the plea standardization of eggs sh terms used by storekeepers a lessly misleading. What is r as a new-laid egg in one might be looked upon as cooking egg in another. A egg may have attained the able age of three months, b is nothing to convey to the pt this all-important fact.

To designate the egg of co a correspondent has drafted terpretation he places upon terms that are used to design

Canada rather than party or private interests, everyone who had heard him realized that it was not the Liberal party that was on the defensive, but the men who had inspired the attack.

No report of a Royal Commission has ever been subjected to such a fire of substantiated criticism. Mr. Graham convicted the Commissioners and the Government out of their own mouths. He showed in absolutely compelling manner the deliberate disregard of facts, of law, of common sense and of national or judicial consideration which marked almost every paragraph of the report.

There was disregard of facts, in regard to the statements as to overclassification, the sub-letting of contracts, the interpretation of evidence and the actual figures as to the alleged "waste" in construction.

There was disregard of law in regard to the statements as to the construction of the Transcona shops "without authority in law"; for the minister of Justice himself to say nothing of many other high legal authorities were on record against the opinion of Mr. Lynch-Staunton.

Moreover the Government in building the St. Malo shops at Quebec, "illegally," according to Mr. Lynch-Staunton, showed that it did not believe its own Commissioners. Furthermore there was a deliberate suppression of a report from the Government's own experts declaring that the Transcona shops were well planned, necessary to the road and economically constructed. Here at one blow disappeared some four or five millions of the alleged "waste" of forty millions.

There was disregard of common sense in the charge that the sub-letting of contracts meant waste of public money; for no great undertaking was ever carried through without sub-letting and the Government itself has recognized the silliness of the Commissioner's contentions, since the process of sub-letting of large contracts is now being endorsed every day by the Government in its railway enterprises and in all great public works.

There was disregard of national considerations in the attempt to prove that the road should never have been constructed at all; that the standard of construction was too high and that it would always be a burden rather than an asset to the people of Canada. The attempt of the Commissioners to damn the whole undertaking, said Mr. Graham, was nothing short of a crime. Its far-reaching consequence not only to the Grand Trunk Pacific but to the people of Canada interested it to be, a great national crime like the committed. The effect of Mr. Graham's criticisms of the report and of his vindication of the Laurier Government's policy in regard to the high standard of the construction of the road was quickly evidenced in the way the succeeding Government speakers side-stepped, as far as possible, the statements of alleged facts made by Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton, in regard to waste in construction. They bent their energies principally towards emphasizing the difference between the original estimates of cost and what the road is actually costing; and they piled up millions on millions of suppositious interest charges with a view to showing that the Grand Trunk Pacific would never pay interest on the cost of the road.

The answer to the charge that the road had cost much more than it was originally expected was given in 1908 by the people of Canada. The electors were then told what the approximate cost of the road would be and why the previous estimates had been exceeded. The question was discussed on every platform in Canada. The answer of the people was: "Complete the road to the standard which we told you in 1904 to complete it to." The people of Canada knew then what the road would cost, and they endorsed the undertaking. All the criticism which the Conservative members are now making with regard to the additional millions is but the re-threshing of old straw.

The party advantage which the Government hoped to gain by the publication of the report has vanished. The more serious talk remains of remedying the injury already done and of restoring public confidence in the honest carrying through of one of the greatest national undertakings since Confederation. Mr. Graham and the Liberal Speakers, did not have to defend what the Liberal party had done. It was theirs rather to boast. The Government has to do the defending and the explaining.

A HALF-MILLION JOB.

POLITICAL JOBBERY COMES HIGH
UNDER MR. ROGERS' ADMINISTRATION.

Political jobbery means the waste of public money. When the people of Canada come to a full realization that it is their money which is so wasted there will be an end of political jobbery. Unfortunately that full realization has not yet come; if it were not so the recent piece of political jobbery which has cost the people of Canada a half a million dollars in connection with the construction of the new Customs warehouse in Ottawa under Hon. Robert Rogers' administration of the Department of Public Works could not have occurred.

More than a year ago the construction of the warehouse was undertaken. Men were put at work to excavate for the foundation. Directing them was R. S. Lowe, a man of long experience in construction work and with a record of efficient service on public and private contracts. But politics soon began to play a part in the affair. A. E. Frapp, one of the Federal members of Ottawa, insisted on the employment of men who were among his partisan supporters. Numbers of these men were incompetent and worthless as laborers. Mr. Lowe protested against being compelled to employ them. But the work of the Conservative patronage dispenser had to be obeyed no matter what the cost of the country. Eventually, Mr. Lowe, who chanced to be a Liberal, was forced from his position. For a time other men were placed in charge but before long another change was made.

This time Mr. Rogers handed the job over to the Foundation Company of Montreal, an American organization. Though hundreds of thousands of the big railway companies of Canada. Coming from that centre, Mr. Gutelius was imbued with the idea that the idea that the entire project was wrong and particularly was it wrong to build this road to the high standard at which it had been started. From the moment that the Minister of Railways and canals began to take his advice, the standard of the Grand Trunk Pacific began to be lowered. I say advisedly that these two gentlemen, or any other gentlemen who held such strong views would not be allowed to sit as petit jurors, and much less as judges, on the most minor case in any of our courts. To these two gentlemen, with their minds already made up, one against the policy, and the other against the project, this Government committed the power to do this country and its great industries, to say nothing of a great national undertaking, lasting and permanent injury.

The two ideas running all through this report are, first, to injure the Liberal party, if possible, and second, to discredit the Grand Trunk Pacific Company. Read it. These two things stand out: the former, Mr. Lynch-Staunton always remembered; the latter never forgot.

Origin of Shaving.

It has been conjectured that the practice of shaving originated from its being found that the beard afforded too good a hold for the enemy in battle. This is the cause assigned for the origin of shaving among the Greeks about the time of Alexander. In other countries the practice was first adopted by military men. Historians mention the alarm in which some Roman emperors lived because of the fear that their barbers might cut their throats. For the sake of concealing a scar on his throat the Emperor Hadrian wore a beard. This fact brought the custom again into fashion.

Antiquity of the Mortgage.

The legal document known as a mortgage can be traced as far back as the dawn of authentic history. The mortgage comes directly down to us from the Romans, but its antiquity is much more remote than the Roman nation. The Greeks, Carthaginians, Persians, Egyptians, Babylonians, all knew of the mortgage and daily used it in their business transactions. It is safe to say that the custom of giving mortgages is practically as old as settled human society.

Its triumph was sealed by the genius of the royal chef, who invented pomme soufflee, surely the most dainty and palatable form in which the vegetable can be served. The court was delighted, and Parmentier was acclaimed as the "inventor of the potato."

HEROIC QUEEN MOTHER

CHRISTINA OF SPAIN IS NOW RESTING ON HER LAURELS.

Austrian Archduchess, Second Wife of Alfonso XII., Was Left to Bring Her Only Son Through All the Plots Which Beset Him In Most Rickety Monarchy In Europe—Devotes Herself to Grandchildren.

Now that King Alfonso and his charming English Queen have such a considerable family, and the crown of Spain seems at last to have arrived at a pitch of security which it has not known for seventy years, little is heard of the able lady who gave Alfonso birth, and who herself reigned in Spain as Queen-Regent for sixteen years.

Yet these are Queen Christina's happiest years. Full of interest in her son and his country, keenly devoted to her royal daughter-in-law and her numerous children, Queen Christina is "resting upon her laurels," and well may she do so, for in spite of considerable personal unpopularity in Spain—where she is supposed to have the "evil-eye"—she has scored a triumph as a queen which has no parallel in the rest of the world.

It is a wonderful story, how this simple Austrian archduchess, widowed at a most trying and untimely hour, brought her one son through the gravest dynastic perils, and has lived to see him firmly established on the most ricketty throne in Europe. Only a woman of tremendous personality and foresight could have achieved such a triumph!

Prior to the accession of Queen Christina's late husband to the Iberian crown the Spanish throne was a dynastic volcano. Kings and queens came and went in quick succession, followed by a republic being proclaimed.

The then ruler of Spain, Queen Isabella, had fled to Paris, and her son, the Prince of the Asturias, had gone to England and joined the army at Sandhurst. He never expected ever to be King of Spain, and in England he was at least free from the fear of assassination.

But the Spaniards soon grew sick of the Republican statesmen, just as the Portuguese are doing to-day, and when they asked the Prince of the Asturias to return to Madrid as "King Alfonso XII.," he loyally, though reluctantly, obeyed. The Spaniards had not seen him for years, and when they did see him once more they were charmed.

They beheld a smart and dapper young king entirely after their own hearts, and they accorded him as much loyalty as can be expected in the land of the proud Hidaigos.

The new king was not allowed to remain a bachelor long. He had long cherished a keen affection for his cousin, the child Princess Mercedes of Montpensier. The marriage was not a popular one, for the bride's family were disliked by the Spaniards, but it was a "love affair," and the Spaniards are nothing if not chivalrous.

On the wedding day King Alfonso gave his pretty young bride a beautiful ruby ring, and almost from that moment the new queen's health began to fail. In spite of every attention the girl Queen of Spain only lived two days after her eighteenth

I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Thwing St., St. Clair, Pa.

MODERN SUPERSTITION.

Owls and Skirts. Pigs, Dogs and Cats.

Pretty nearly everything under the sun seems to be connected with some superstition, from an owl to the hem of your skirt. Never hear of either? Well, if your skirt happens to be turned up a bit at the bottom, you can be sure someone is thinking of you. You can, however, make everyone think more, especially the men, if you wear a slit skirt. As for the owl, if it should come into the house, trouble is sure to follow. The best thing to do when you expect an owl is to put all the cut glass into the china closet and the china closet in the dining-room closet; and then lock that closet. For the owl you can then use anything; a broom is generally pretty handy.

The first time pigs cross your threshold, make them jump over your pants belt, or your wife's garter, or the maid's apron; then they will come home regularly. A plan now in use among up-to-date Canadian farmers is to keep the pigs in regular pens and feed them twice a day. It is regarded as a scheme more popular with the wife and the maid.

Eggs Scalloped With Meat.

Take three eggs, three tablespooc-fuls bread or cracker crumbs, one-half teaspoonful of mixed mustard, one tablespoonful butter, two of hot milk, salt and paprika. Put about three tablespoonfuls of this dry mixture aside and mix the remainder with half the butter, the mustard and enough milk to form a thick paste. Butter individual dishes, one for each egg, and fill with the paste, leaving a hollow in the centre for the egg. Carefully break on egg into each of these hollows and shake over the top of each egg some of the dry mixture laid aside. Put bits of butter on top of each and bake.

Their First Meeting.

"I am very glad to meet you again, Miss Dowlsley," he said when they had been introduced to each other.

"Again?" she replied. "Why, have we met before?"

"Well, perhaps we haven't exactly met before, but you tickled my chin with your feather for about an hour one evening in an elevated car."

Wifely Curiosity.

"Henry, dear, I tried on a suit of your clothes the other day, and it fitted me to perfection."

"May I ask your object in taking such a liberty with my garments?"

"Why, Belle Greene said she heard Tommy Tolliver say that you wasn't much bigger than a shrimp, and I was just wondering how big a shrimp is."

Good Advice.

Never forget the advice of Themistocles. Said that ancient, "I would bestow my daughter upon a man without money, but not upon money without a man." Just change money for title and see the different reading: "I would bestow my daughter upon a man without title, but not upon title without a man."

The Higher Education.

The sixteen-year-old princess who used to read books on "What a Young Girl Ought to Know" now has a sixteen-year-old daughter who is writing books on "What a Parent Ought to Know."

Ancient Money.

In Biblical days silver and gold coins were struck of such weight that one of them represented the value of a particular animal. Thus the word kesitah (used in Genesis), translated "pieces of money," means literally a lamb. The Latin pecunia, from which comes our word pecuniary, comes from pecus, a general name for sheep and the smaller animals. In early times coins bore figures of a horse, a bull or a hog, together with the names of the animals pictured. Afterward, as values changed, the figures upon the coins no longer bore representations of their value in cattle, but figures representing a rose, an eagle, etc.

Spaniards, but it was a "love affair," and the Spaniards are nothing if not chivalrous.

On the wedding day King Alfonso gave his pretty young bride a beautiful ruby ring, and almost from that moment the new queen's health began to fail. In spite of every attention the girl Queen of Spain only lived two days after her eighteenth birthday.

She left no children, and the heart-broken young king removed the ring and gave it to his grandmother, Queen Christina, who only survived the gift for a few weeks. The king then gave the royal ring to his youngest sister-in-law, who went to her grave three months later.

They said the ring was "unlucky," but the king's English training had made him skeptical of all superstitious beliefs, and he proceeded to wear it himself.

He was very soon "a stricken man!" As Spain's first necessity was an heir (all the bloodshed for many years having been caused by the failure of direct heirs to its crown) King Alfonso promptly married again. He this time chose for his bride the Austrian archduchess, who was a great-great-niece of the ill-fated Marie Antoinette.

This young princess had been dogged by misfortune almost from her birth, and when she had presented her king with two little daughters, death overtook him very suddenly.

The sorrowing royal widow removed the ill-omened ring from her dead husband's hand, and decided that it should never again be worn. So she caused it to be suspended round the neck of the Holy Virgin of Almadeno, Madrid's patron saint, and there it hangs to this day.

But youth and hope were with Alfonso's second widow, and when, six months after her husband's death she gave to Spain her only son, the present King Alfonso, she entered upon a new career. From that interesting moment Queen Christina devoted herself heart and soul to the upbringing of her son, so that he might be able to hold his own against a whole nation of machinators.

And right worthy has Alfonso XIII. justified Queen Christina's careful mothering of him. Time and time again has he escaped death by the "skin of his teeth." Many another woman would have removed her precious charge from an atmosphere so volcanic, but alone she stood by him all through the dangerous 16 years of his minority.

During these years she had the sorrow of seeing her son's country deprived in war of all its once vast colonial empire. During the six months that elapsed between the death of King Alfonso XII. and the birth of King Alfonso XIII., Queen Christina's eldest daughter was Queen of Spain.

Queen Christina was but 25 when she was widowed, and though not loved, she is highly respected by all classes of the Spanish people.

It is bad luck to hear a dog bark at night. This superstition has been found to depend on circumstances; it is a matter of whose dog. If it's the dog next door, the best thing to use is a flattery; but a good aim is even more valuable.

Women believe that, if they go somewhere on Monday, they will be on the go the rest of the week. That may be the explanation of the fact that women like to wash on Monday. Kill a cat, and you will have bad luck for seven years; there is, however, no special superstition as to kittens, so it is best to begin on your cats early.

The Germans believe that, if your right hand itches, you will get money; if your left hand itches, you will spend much. Canadians are the only people in the world who have both hands itching all the time.

Revealed.

An insurance agent was trying to induce a hard man to deal with to take out a policy on his house. After listening to him for an hour while he painted in vivid colors the extreme danger of fire consuming the house, the hard man to deal with said:

"Do you really think it likely that my house will burn down within the time that the policy will run?"

"Certainly," replied the agent. "Have I not been trying all this time to convince you that I do?"

"Then," said the hard man to deal with, "why is your company so anxious to bet me money that it will not?"

The agent was silent and thoughtful for a moment; then he drew the other apart into an unfrequented place and whispered in his ear:

"My friend, I will impart to you a dark secret. Years ago the company disgraced me before my sweetheart. Under an assumed name I have wormed myself into its service for revenge, and as there is a heaven above us I will have its heart's blood!"

Services Appreciated.

A popular doctor was not long ago much pleased with a certain aerated water, and by his assiduous recommendations procured for it a celebrity it justly deserved. The doctor acted solely in the interests of humanity generally and expected no return. To his surprise there came one morning an effusive letter from the company, saying that his recommendations had done them so much good that they "ventured to send him a hundred"—Here the page came to an end. "This will never do," said the doctor; "it is very kind, but I could not think of accepting anything." Here he turned the page and found the sentence ran—"of our circulars for distribution."

An Unreliable Doctor.

Mr. Seabury came from the office one night and told his wife he had been to see the doctor.

"He said I was all tired out," said Seabury, "and he thinks I ought to go away on a fishing trip."

"But, of course, you don't believe him," responded the wife.

"Why not?" queried Seabury in surprise.

"Well," said Mrs. Seabury, "you didn't have any confidence in him when he told me I ought to go to Europe."

THE WEEK IN THE LEGISLATURE

REDISTRIBUTION.

Hon. W. J. Hanna introduced into the House the Redistribution Bill. This is the final proof that the general elections are in prospect and will undoubtedly be held before another session. No details of the redistribution are given in the draft bill. After the second reading it will go to a select Committee of the House.

THE REFORM.

For the third year in succession the Government has voted down Opposition proposals for Tax Reform. The debate this week occupied considerable time in the House but the majority of speakers were from the Opposition and, therefore, in favor of Tax Reform. Only a few of the Government members spoke on the subject. The Opposition pointed out especially that its scheme of Tax Reform did not compel municipalities to change their system of taxation at all, but simply gave them the local option to lower the tax on improvements if they thought it was wise to do so. It was pointed out that petitions for the right of local option have been received by the Government from all parts of the Province, from farmers and from city men, from representatives of manufacturers' associations and from Labor Unions. Moreover the city of Toronto voted in favor of Tax Reform by an overwhelming majority. The Government, however, did not seem to be influenced by these considerations and voted down the proposal once more.

BILINGUALISM.

An all day debate on the subject of Bilingual schools brought forward a number of interesting speeches. Napoleon Champagne, ex-Conservative member for East Ottawa, gave a brilliant oration lasting for nearly three hours in which he visited practically every country in the world and finally settled down in Canada for an hour and half. The speech was a plea for the rights of minorities in regard to their language and whatever one may think of his views it cannot be denied that Champagne held the interest of the whole House, hour after hour and made a reputation for himself as a speaker of remarkable fire and brilliance.

Hon. Dr. Reaume and Hon. Dr. Pyne defended the Government policy in regard to Bilingual schools.

The Liberal policy was declared in clear-out definite terms by Mr. N. W. Rowell who pointed out that this was identically the same policy as that enunciated by him in 1911. He claimed that the Conservative policy had shifted several times in the last two or three years. The Liberal policy on the other hand, remained intact and was as follows:—

"In every school in the Province it is the duty of the State to see that every child receives a good English education. If that were done—that is the law to-day and the breakdown is in the administration of the law—I believe there would be no ground of complaint in any section of the Province and consistent with that, if the French Canadian parents desire that their children should also in the schools study their own language, so that they may acquire a facility to use that efficiently and well, I can see no objection on the part of any citizen of the Province."

HYDRO RADIALS.

A resolution urged upon the Dominion Government the wisdom of encouraging the construction of Municipal Hydro Electric Radial Railways.

The resolution in its original form, as presented by the Opposition, asked that the Dominion Government should grant a similar subsidy to Hydro Radials as to steam railways, but the Government amended this and made it weaker in substance. It is worthy of note that both this year and last it has been the Opposition which has taken the initiative in urging the construction of Hydro Radials through out the Province.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

Hon. W. H. Hearst has introduced two measures dealing with the question of campaign contributions. In general idea they follow the line of Opposition Bills which have been before the House for the last two years, but in detail they are much less explicit and leave many more loopholes. One of them calls for publicity in campaign contributions—the other prohibits contributions from certain parties. There will likely be a protracted debate on this subject as the Government proposals are obviously much less stringent than the bills introduced by Mr. Rowell and his colleague, Mr. Anderson.

NOTES.

Hon. J. J. Foy has introduced a bill to appoint a Provincial fire marshal who will have power to enquire into the cause and origin of any fire and also who will have power to order structural changes in buildings.

The Workmen's Compensation Act passed into committee stage and various details were debated. The bill will not be finally passed until near the end of the session.

HOME REMEDIES.

Simple Ways of Treating Ordinary Ailments.

A medicinal lemonade of value is made of flaxseed, lemons, sugar and water. Pour one quart of boiling water upon four tablespoonfuls of flaxseed. Add the juice of two lemons, but not the peel. Sweeten to taste. Steep three hours in a covered pitcher. Ice it before drinking. It is admirable for colds.

A quick mustard plaster is made as follows: Trim the crust from a thin slice of light bread and sprinkle it thickly with ground mustard. Spread a very thin cloth over the mustard and dampen with vinegar or water.

A well dampened piece of bread is better as a poultice than either flaxseed or slippery elm and will neither dry out nor sour so quickly. A little egg added will prevent blistering.

An old fashioned but very good liniment for rheumatism is made of the whites of two eggs, one-half pint of vinegar and one-half pint of turpentine. Shake together and rub into the skin.

Five cents' worth of camphor gum in half a pint of alcohol makes a good headache liniment. Earache may be relieved by heating a brick, wrapping it in two thicknesses of flannel and pouring hot water on it. This will generate steam, which will reach every part of the ear if it is held close to it.

A good salve for burns is made by melting together a tablespoonful of lard and a lump of resin about the size of a nutmeg. Stir briskly and when you remove it from the fire add a ta-

STRANGE SEA TREASURE.

Ambergris Is One of the Most Prized

Products of the Deep.

A piece of ambergris estimated to be worth about $150,000, recently brought into Victoria, B.C., was declared to be one of the largest masses of this strange sea treasure ever found.

Because of its great value, the infrequency with which it is found and the mystery which long existed as to its origin ambergris from the earliest times has been regarded as one of the most prized products of the deep. It is a solid, fatty, inflammable substance, generally of a dull gray or blackish color, and possessing after exposure to the air a peculiarly sweet, earthy odor. Ambergris is now known to be a morbid secretion formed in the intestines of the sperm whale, but for centuries it was variously believed to be the solidified foam of the sea, fungoid marine growth, gum which exuded from the trees and flowed into the ocean, or by-product of bird life.

Ambergris occurs in lumps of various shapes and sizes from half an ounce to 150 pounds or more. When first taken from the whale it throws off a very offensive odor. This gradually gives way to a subtle aroma, said by some writers faintly to suggest that of honey. Although its almost sole use to-day is the making of perfumery, ambergris was for centuries highly esteemed as a medicine for certain diseases, and it was long used in the sacred rites of the church and in connection with fragrant gums burned in the apartments of royalty.

All seafaring men are constantly on the lookout for ambergris, yet many whaling skippers in fifty years of experience have never come across a quarter ounce of the substance. The amount of ambergris produced annually from all sources varies greatly, scarcely any being found in some years, while in others a single chunk worth $100,000 and more may be brought in by some fortunate vessel.

What is undoubtedly the most valuable lot ever secured up to recent date was a mass of 162 pounds obtained in 1891, and was finally sold in

A Visit to the Apocryphal Sindbad the Sailor.

We were on our way to Bussorah as the apocryphal Sindbad the Sailor. Bussorah seaport of Bagdad, from which distant about 500 miles by river.

Bussorah in the summer is less than a fiery furnace, for thermometer registers more than 100 degrees F. in the shade during successive days, and the mean temperature, night and day, for up to four months, is about 95 degrees.

Malarial fevers, dysentery are prevalent, and the town frequently visited by plague and, and yet, thanks to the cool prevailing north winds, the town is not essentially unhealthy for those who are acclimated.

The habits and wants of the population are simple and are likely to remain so for some time to come. The sanitary state of the town is poor. The creeks, which supply it with drinking water, are used indiscriminately for all household purposes, and the stench from them at low water is offensive.

The governor general of the town of Bussorah had his private residence in the upper story of a flimsy plaster edifice overlooking the road. The walls of his house have been more than six inches thick and it was full of windows.

NOT A GOOD JAILER.

Still, the Burman Sentry Was Something in a Quandary.

The warders in Burmese jails are nearly always men from the Punjab and northern India. They are large and muscular, but the principal reason for selecting them is that they are not Buddhists. The Burman is sometimes employed as a warder, but his Buddhist education often causes his prejudices to come in collision with his official duties, as in the case of one warder.

A phoongyee, or Buddhist priest, in jail for stealing, had been placed in solitary confinement for disobeying the prison rules. His influence as a priest had persuaded a Burman warder to procure him some betel nuts, which, being discovered in his possession, caused his punishment.

The stone cell in which the priest was confined had a plank supported at both ends by insertion into slots in the walls. The plank served as a bed, and at night the priest jumped on it again and again in order to force the ends out of the shallow sockets.

The Burman sentry peeped into the aperture of the door and asked him to desist.

The convict replied that he was a priest and, as such, forbidden to sleep upon a raised bed.

By this time he had got the board free and, to disarm the sentry's suspicions, lay down upon it and feigned sleep. The sentry returned to his post, but a few hours later he was alarmed to see the phoongyee walking softly down the passage. He had used the board as a lever to force out two of the bars in the door and had managed to squeeze himself through the aperture.

The sentry, a Buddhist, was embarrassed. To lay violent hands upon the holy convict was out of the question; to allow him to escape would bring punishment upon himself. As the passage doors were locked and the priest safe for the present, the sentry ventured to remonstrate with his charge on the impropriety of his behavior.

The tramp of the relief guard was heard outside. The sentry knelt and implored the priest to return to his cell. The door opened upon the tableau—a uniformed sentry in an attitude of supplication before a convict.

The Punjabese who formed the relief guard, not being Buddhists, had no respect for phoongyees. The convict priest was promptly bundled into a new cell.—Boston Herald.

Distant Fields.

A wealthy lady in Grand Rapids, Mich., went to New York to purchase furniture, believing she would thus get better designs and fashions. When the furniture arrived, she found that it had been manufactured in Grand Rapids, a few blocks from her home.

Distant fields look green, but if you will refer to our advertising columns, you will find that you can supply your wants right here, quite as well as by sending your money to mail order or other out-of-town houses. Give your own towns people a chance first, anyway.

THEY DON'T WASTE WORDS.

Nyasaland Natives Exist in a State of Partial Coma.

Referring to the native peculiarities
in Nyasaland, the author of "Hunting
the Elephant in Africa," Captain C. H.
Stigand, comments on a certain state
of coma into which the "boys" descend
when there is no active work for them
to do, or at least when there is no compulsion to do it. He believes that the native is capable of assuming a state
in which the mind is absolutely detached and not working, and when in such a state he is only recalled by a start to his present surroundings.

The life of the head man of a village in Nyasaland, when not engaged in the strenuous pursuit of his official duties, is something like this: At sunrise he crawls out of his hut and sits outside. After a short time his wife
crawls out and offers him some food.
He eats this and then makes his way
to a tree, perhaps a hundred yards from the village. Under this he sits in deep abstraction, till about noon a child brings him some food and water.
After partaking of this he moves a little so as to get the afternoon shade.
He then sits in deep meditation until sunset, when he crawls into his hut
and goes to sleep.

Sometimes he is joined by a few other old men under his tree. They hardly ever speak to each other, and if they say anything it is to make some obvious remark, as, "There is a dog." "Yes,
it is a dog." "Oh." "Ah," and a further period of silence.

GOD'S STANDARD IS PERFECTION

The Christian Must Develop Character-Likeness to Christ.

Desire For Harmony With God Part
of Man's Original Perfection—
Some Naturally Drawn To God—
Faith the First Step—Consecration the Second Step—Then Growth In Grace and Knowledge.

PASTOR RUSSELL

March 29.—
Pastor Russell
preached a very interesting discourse to-day on Holiness. His
text was, "As He
who hath called
you is holy, so be ye holy in all
manner of conversation."—1 Peter 1:15.

The Pastor reminded his audience that the Scriptures explicitly declare that our Creator made
man in His own image and pronounced him very good. A part of our first parents' perfection was their desire for harmony with God; but after Adam's disobedience they were cut off from Divine fellowship—as a part of the penalty of sin. This alienation from their Creator was doubtless one of their most grievous trials.

As centuries rolled on and Adam's posterity became more and more depraved, the original character-likeness to God became indistinct. In some the desire for God is so feeble
that they are easily satisfied by pleasure or by sensuality. Many are separated from God through ignorance,
superstition and the doctrines of demons, as the Bible declares. Misunderstanding our gracious Creator,
they are driven away from Him, and blinded by "the god of this world."

Then the Pastor showed that with some of the race the desire for God
and righteousness has prevailed
above the stupefying influence of the world, the flesh and the Devil. This class are drawn by the natural inclination of their minds Godward,
and are in a favorable condition to hear God's voice speaking peace to them and pointing them to Jesus Christ as the Way, the Truth and the Life.

The Call of the Gospel Age.

Next the Pastor pointed out from Scripture the first two steps to be taken by those who desire to come back into harmony with God. The first step is that of faith in Jesus as their Redeemer. Those who desire to take it must recognize that they are sinners that Jesus' death on Calvary was sacrificial, and that its grand outcome will be the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom for up-lifting mankind out of sin and death
conditions.

Those who have sufficient faith to take the first step may then take the second—consecration. After they have presented their all in sacrifice
—time, talent, wealth, etc.—then our
Lord imputes to them individually
His merit, thus making them holy
and acceptable to God, who immediately begets them of His Holy Spirit
to a new nature. Thenceforth they

MADE HIMSELF AT HOME.

When He Got Through His Standing
 Was Unquestioned.

Robert Thorpe, an old Missouri stage
 driver, used to tell a story of how Anderson, the jayhawker, got one of his recruits. The Anderson boys held up Thorpe's stage near Glasgow one day.
 Among the passengers was a raw-boned young Missourian who looked
 about as tough as the jayhawkers
 themselves.

"Give me yer val'bles," Anderson demanded of the youth, as he went down
 the line.

"Ain't got none," answered the young squirrel hunter.

"Where ye goin'?"

"To join Anderson's jayhawkers."

The leader sized him up a bit.

"Kin ye swim the Missouri river?"
 he asked him.

"Reckon so," the young man answered.

"Could ye kill a man?"

"Reckon so."

Anderson stepped forward and spat
 in the youngster's face. The youth
 bounded at the jayhawker like a cat,
 caught him full in the face with a right swing and went down on top of him, kicking and clawing.

The jayhawkers pulled the young demon off their leader, and he got up.

"You belong," he said. "Boys, give him a hawse."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Recognition Comes Slowly.

"The late Alfred Russel Wallace,
 the codiscoverer with Darwin of evolution, had a hard row to hoe at first,"
 said a physiologist.

"Poor Dr. Wallace had in fact such a very hard row to hoe that he couldn't afford to marry till he was sixty-three,
 when to balance matters he married a young girl of eighteen by whom he had a son and a daughter.

"I commiserated in London last summer with Dr. Wallace.

"It was too bad," I once said to
 him. 'A man of genius like you,
 cramped with poverty till past middle life! It was too bad.'

"My friend," Dr. Wallace replied,
 "always you will find the fire of genius
 takes a long, long time to make the pot boil."—Detroit Free Press.

Bad For the Laurels.

William Dean Howells, according to the Washington Star, was admonishing a young novelist, who, after writing a fine novel, had produced only slight commercial things.

"Two critics," he said to the young man, "were discussing a certain author.

"His laurels," said the first critic,
 'already seem faded and bedraggled.'

"That," the other critic agreed, 'is because he has been resting on them.'"

In the Customary Place.

A well known English bishop some time since lost his third wife. A cler-gyman who had known the first wife returned from Africa and wanted to see the grave. He called at the cathedral and saw the verger.

"Can you tell me where the bishop's
 wife is buried?"

"Well, sir," replied the verger. "I don't know for certain, but he mostly buries 'em at Brompton."—London Mail.

take the first step may then take the second—conservation. After they
 have presented their all in sacrifice
 —time, talent, wealth, etc.—then our
 Lord imputes to them individually
 His merit, thus making them holy
 and acceptable to God, who immediately begets them of His Holy Spirit
 to a new nature. Thenceforth they are New Creatures, to whom "old things have passed away and all things become new." But there are imperfections attaching to their flesh, which may occasionally crop
 out. These the New Creature must promptly notice; for the New Creature is the new will, which henceforth regulates the mortal body.

The Pastor fears that some Christians have not realized what a contract they have on hand. All the consecrated, he declared, must remember that their first obligation is to their own flesh. While any may give valuable suggestions to others, yet the responsibility for the body rests with each as a New Creature. Some are imperfect in one direction, others in another. But "there is none righteous (none perfect), no, not one."

The New Creatures in School.

Then the Pastor showed that those whom God has begotten of His Holy Spirit as New Creatures enter the School of Christ for character-development. There they must grow in grace, knowledge and love. As St.
 Paul explains, they must be mentally transformed, made ready for the Kingdom of God. Thereafter matters are to be decided, not according to their own preferences, but according to the principles of justice and love—
 by rules altogether different from those that formerly regulated them.

Everything done by those in the School of Christ must be squared by the Rule of Justice, the speaker continued. Many of the Lord's people evidently have not fully realized that they must practice the Golden Rule
 to the full extent of their ability.
 Failure on the part of some to recognize this principle, he declared, has caused the way of the Lord to be spoken evil of sometimes. If a Christian fails to pay his debts or is careless as to how he involves himself,
 it is because this principle of justice
 does not stand out prominently enough before his mind. If as an old creature he has habitually ignored
 the lines of justice and shirked responsibilities, this will not do for him
 as a New Creature.

The cultivation of the principles
 of justice in act, word and thought
 must be the Christian's daily concern. Whoever thinks unjustly will act unjustly, in spite of himself. The New Creature must always think of others calmly, without prejudice, giving them the benefit of every doubt.

Value of Money.

Wealth is no sinecure. Moreover,
 the value of money depends partly
 on knowing what to do with it, partly on the manner in which it is acquired.—Sir John Lubbock.

No Joke at All.

Reginald came into the club in a highly excited state one afternoon and drew an acquaintance aside into a corner of the lounge.

"What do you think?" said he. "I went to see that broker fellow Rosen-
 wasser and asked for a loan of $1,000
 to tide me over. If you'll believe me
 the bouncer said all he could spare
 was 50 cents."

"Never mind, Reggie," replied the acquaintance soothingly, "that was just Rosenwasser's little joke."

"Joke! You call it a joke, do you?
 Look here! Here's the 50 cents."—

To Walk Round the World.

MONTREAL, March 31.—Mr. and Mrs. Hartley started out on a walking tour round the world yesterday. Their assets were two dollars in money and a few boxes of tinned food. The two globe trotters are athletes. The wife is 23 years of age and the husband is three years her senior. He is a former soldier, and during the South African war he saw active service
 with the Sixth King's Royal Rifles.
 They will earn money on the way by giving a series of dances, and later
 on they will print a little pamphlet
 of their experiences.

GENIUS AND A CLUB.

Contemporary Criticism as an Unfair and Merciless Weapon.

The world has never seen an age in which there was more excuse for questioning the validity of contemporary judgment. It would be the height of folly to expect posterity to authenticate the vaporings of an appreciation which in shifting its stress from the universal to the personnel has changed from criticism into colloquy, from clinic into causerie. Indeed, it is nothing less than a truism that the experience of the artist in all ages, according to the verdict of history, is identical with itself.

In the words of Sidney Lanier, "••• the artist shall put forth humbly and lovingly the very best and highest that is within him, utterly regardless of contemporary criticism. What possible claim can contemporary criticism set up to respect—that criticism which stoned Stephen, hooted Paul for a madman, bound Columbus in chains, drove Dante into exile, made Shakespeare write the sonnet 'When In Disgrace With Fortune and Men's Eyes,' gave Milton £3 for 'Paradise Lost,' kept Samuel Johnson cooling his heels on Lord Chesterfield's doorstep, reviled Shelley as an unclean dog, killed Keats, cracked jokes on Gluck, Schubert, Beethoven, Berlioz and Wagner and committed so many other impious follies and stupidities that a thousand letters like this could not suffice even to catalogue them?"

The verdict of the "Intellectuals" has always been a veritable stumbling block in the path of genius.

"It is from men of established literary reputation," asserts Bernard Shaw, "that we learn that William Blake was mad, that Shelley was spoiled by living in a low set, that Robert Owen was a man who did not know the world, that Ruskin is incapable of comprehending political economy, that Zola is a mere blackguard and Ibsen is Zola with a wooden leg. The great musician accepted by his unskilled listener is vilified by his fellow musician. It was the musical culture of Europe which pronounced Wagner the inferior of Mendelssohn and Meyerbeer."

It is not enough to say with the brilliant author of "Contemporaries" that contemporary criticism is mere conversation; it is often little more than mere gossip. One is often inclined to question with Lowell whether the powers that be in criticism are really the powers that ought to be.—From Archibald Henderson's "European Dramatists."

Shark skin, shark teeth, shark oil, shark meat and several other byproducts of the dead shark are articles of greater or lesser utility, but I have never heard of but one instance where the living shark was put to a practical use. This, says Lewis R. Freeman, was when they used him as a prison guard in the old days when British convicts were transported to Australia, the monsters serving this purpose for many years at the Port Arthur settlement, ten miles south of Hobart, the present capital of Tasmania. The prisons at this point, some of which may still be seen, were situated

CLIMAX OF A CURIOUS BATTLE

The Conflict, Which Was Forced the Jabbering Brutes, Resolve Into a Living Avalanche That Down the Hill—A Lucky Escape

When I was in South Africa, a correspondent writes, I left Mangoch afternoon in company with a couple of men who were traveling up country. We rode at a slow canter through long grass, for grass grows long in Africa, over your head very often of us carried a gun or even a rifle. All we had were sjamboks, made of a single strip of hippopotamus hide and stout enough to maim if the blow were well directed.

We were about a mile below the Matopos in the south of the Matopos that leads through to Bulawayo. Suddenly we saw that the grass on the left was being disturbed over a wide area, and out of curiosity we followed. We found out that there was simply alive with hundreds of baboons marching toward the hill.

There were brown baboons, black baboons and baboons almost black. The baboons, big baboons, many of them, pickaninny baboons, granddads almost white with age, reined in our horses and wagons. They showed no fear and no doubt get acquainted with us. They came at us over their shoulders, they massed huddled their babies tight against their sides, they quickened their pace.

We ought to have let them pass. One of the fellows suggested in a moment of mischief that we should have fired. Before you could say "three" the three of us were in a moment and began to slash with our sjamboks in all directions. The baboons bared and showed their teeth, but they attempted to attack us. I was safe so long as we were in the trees, which they tried to climb. The trees were thorny and they had to give it up. Then they started down the hills again.

We drove them right to the edge of the hills, but there we had to stop. We could not take our horses up the rocks. The baboons swarmed over the rocks. I didn't stop to think of the danger, but I was up that hill as quickly as the baboons were.

A black old man baboon, a white one, and I made a rush for him. I didn't run. I cut at him with my sjambok. He only bared his teeth and snarled. I looked round. On either side were big men baboons, a black one, a white one. They had no intention to run from me or to let me get away from them.

I lost my nerve and could not think of a way out. All I could do was to back up to a rock. The baboons at bay with my sjambok and wait there until my con-

prison guard in the old days when British convicts were transported to Australia, the monsters serving this purpose for many years at the Port Arthur settlement, ten miles south of Hobart, the present capital of Tasmania. The prisons at this point, some of which may still be seen, were situated upon a peninsula whose only connection with the mainland was by a long, narrow strip of sand called, from its configuration, the Eaglehawk's Neck.

The convicts were allowed considerable liberty on the peninsula, but to prevent their escape to the mainland half starved bloodhounds were chained all the way across the narrowest portion of the neck. Several prisoners having avoided the "bloodhound zone" by swimming, the authorities adopted the effective but greivous expedient of feeding the sharks at that point several times a day. In a few weeks the place became literally alive with the voracious man eaters, and from that time on the only convict who ever escaped accomplished his purpose by rolling himself up in kelp and working along, inch by inch, timing his movements to correspond with those of the other heaps of seaweed that were being rolled by the surf.—Wide World Magazine.

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD
THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY.

If your child is under-weight listless, ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that we can endorse so strongly as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it, and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object giving their children. It does its work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the stunted puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong, well, and full of animal spirits, children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to lose a cent. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also—for convalescents—for all who are nervous and tired-out, run-down, no matter what the cause—we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or money back. Sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us, $1.00. Wallace's Drug Store Limited.

The Husbands of Edith

By GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Alfred Rodney was a persevering man. It is barely possible that he occupied a lower social plane than that attained by his wife, but he was a man of accomplishment, if not accomplishments. He always did what he set out to do. Be it said in defense of this assertion he not only routed out his entire protesting flock, but had them at the West-Bahnhof in time to catch the Orient express—luggage, accessories and all. Be it also said that he was the only one in the party save Constance and Tootles who took the situation amiably.

"Dash the Odell-Carneys!" was what Freddie Ulstervelt said as the train drew out of the station. Brock looked up approvingly.

"That's the first sensible thing I've heard him say," he muttered, loud enough to be heard by Miss Fowler. "I say, who are the Odell-Carneys? First I've heard of 'em."

"The Odell-Carneys? Oh, dear, have you never heard of them?" she cried in surprise. He felt properly rebuked. "They are very swell Londoners. It is said—"

"Then, good heavens, they'll know I'm not Medcroft," he whispered in alarm.

"Not at all, my dear Roxbury. That's just where you're wrong. They don't know Roxbury the first. I've gone over it all with Edith. She's just crazy to get into the Odell-Carney set. I regret to say that they have failed to notice the Medcrofts up to this time. Secretly, Edith has ambitions. She has gone to the lord mayor's dinner and to the Royal Antiquarians and to Sir John Brodley's and a lot of other functions on the outer rim, but she's never been able to break through the crust and taste the real sweets of London society. My dear Roxbury, the Odell-Carneys entertain the nobility without compunction, and they've been known to hobnob with royalty. Mrs. Odell-Carney was a Lady Somebody-or-other before she married the second time. She's terribly smart, Roxbury."

"Well, it seems that Odell-Carney is promoting a new South African mine bear," she pleaded so gently, her eyes so full of appeal, that he flushed with sudden shame and contrition.

"Forgive me," he said, the old light coming back into his eyes so strongly that she quivered for an instant before lowering her own. "I hate that confounded puppy," he explained lamely, guarding his voice with a new care. "If you felt as I do you would too."

She laughed in the old way, but she was not soon to forget that moment when panic was so imminent.

"I—I don't see how any one can help liking Freddie," she said without actually knowing why. He stared hard at the Danube below. After a long silence he said:

"It's all tommyrot about its being blue, isn't it?"

She was also looking at the dark brown, swollen river that has been immortalized in song.

"It's never blue. It's always a yellow ochre, it seems to me."

He waited a long time before venturing to express the thought that of late had been troubling him seriously.

"I wonder if you truly realize the difficulty Edith will have in satisfying an incredulous world with her absolutely truthful story. She'll have to explain, you know. There's bound to be a skeptic or two, my dear Constance."

"But there's Roxbury," she protested, her face clouding nevertheless. "He will set everything right."

"The world will say he is a gullible fool," said he gently. "And the world always laughs at, not with, a fool. Alas, my dear sister, it's a very deep pool we're in." He leaned closer and allowed a quaint, half bantering, wholly diffident smile to cross his face. "I—I'm afraid that you are the only being on earth who can make the story thoroughly plausible."

"I?" she demanded quickly. Their eyes met, and the wonder suddenly left hers. She blushed furiously. "Nonsense!" she said and abruptly left him to take a seat beside Katherine Rodney. He found small comfort in the whisperings and titterings that came willy nilly to his burning ears from the corner of the compartment. He had a disquieting impression that they were discussing him. It was forced in upon him that being a brother-in-law is not an enviable occupation.

"Wot?" he asked almost fiercely after the insistent Freddie had thrice repeated a question.

"I say, will you have a cigarette?" half shouted Freddie, exasperated.

"Oh! No, thanks. The train makes such a beastly racket, don't you know."

"They told me at the Bristol you were deaf, but— Oh, I say, old man, I'm sorry. Which ear is it?"

"The one next to you," replied Brock, recovering from his confusion. "I hear perfectly well with the other one."

"Yes," drawled Freddie, with a wink, "so I've observed." After a reflective silence the young man ventured the interesting conclusion, "She's a stunning girl, all right." Brock looked politely askance. "By Jove, I'm glad she isn't my sister-in-law!"

"I suppose I'm expected to ask why," frigidly.

"Certainly. Because if she was I couldn't. Do you get the point?" He crossed his legs and looked insupportably sure of himself.

They reached Munich late in the afternoon and went at once to the Hotel tric hall bells which serve to attract the chambermaids to given spots. If one needs the chambermaid he presses the button in his room and a little bell in the hall tinkles furiously until she responds and shuts it off. In that way one is sure that she has heard and is coming, a most admirable bit of German ingenuity. She happens to be taking her lunch at the time, the bell goes on ringing until she returns. It is a faithful bell. Coming back to Odell-Carney, the maid on his floor was making up a room in close proximity when a most annoying thing happened to her. A porter who reason to dislike her came along and turned her key from the outside, locking her in the room. She couldn't get at it, and she had been warned against making a sound that might disturb the English guest. With rare intelligence, she did not scream or make an outcry, but wisely proceeded to press the button for a chambermaid. Then she evidently sat down to wait. To make the story short, she rang her own call bell for two hours, no other maid condescending to notice the call, which speaks volumes for the almost martial system of the hotel. The bell was opposite the narrator's door. Is it, therefore, surprising that he required a great deal of time to tell all that he felt? It was not so much of what he did that he spoke at such great length, but of what he felt.

"Pon me soul," he exploded in the end, twisting his mustache with nervous energy, "it was the damdest nap I ever had. I didn't close my eyes, defend me if I did."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Odell-Carneys.

WHILE Odell-Carney was studiously adjusting his eyeglasses for a final glare at an unoffending bus boy who almost dropped his tray of plates in consequence, Mr. Rodney fussily intervened and introduced the Medcrofts. Mrs. Odell-Carney was delightfully gracious. She was sure that no nicer party could have been "got together." Her husband may have been excessively slow in most things, but he was quick to recognize and appreciate feminine beauty of face and figure. He was absent at once in the presence of the craft. They always are worse really, don't you know. How American Mr. Medcroft is! I bet gets that from having lived with an American wife. And darling baby! She's wonderf Mr. Medcroft, don't you think one could mistake that child's never!"

Edith may have gasped and wildly about in quest of help, agitation went unnoticed by friend. From that moment Mrs. Medcroft encouraged arate regard for the circumstance decided that it was best new alone with her husband. Th was now too precious to go un for a single moment that might explainable when the triumph of revelation came to hand. pressed this fact upon her sister the result that, while Brock was alone with his prudent wife, seldom far from the side of the lieutenant. As if preoccupied for an ultimate alibi, the Tootles began to show unmistakable signs of aversion for her tenant.

Mrs. Rodney, being quite fashioned mother, could not resist herself to this unfilial attitude gravely confided to her husband she feared Medcroft was missing his child behind their backs.

"Well, the poodle likes him as protested Mr. Rodney, who Brock, "and if a dog likes a man altogether a bad lot. If you wouldn't spread the report."

"Spread it!" she sniffed indignantly. "Are they not my own cousins? removed," she concluded as a thought. "Do you imagine would spread it? He may be natural father, but I shall not one to say so. Please bear mind, Alfred."

"Well, let's not argue about it. Mr. Rodney, departing before she disobey the injunction.

Of course, there was no little fusion at the Hotel Tyrol was came to establishing the Med For awhile it looked as though would have to share a room with Tootles, relegating Burton to an and a couch, but Constance, in a family conference, was seized inspiration which saved the night, more properly speaking "I have it, Roxbury," she cried eyes dancing. "You can sleep balcony. A great many invalids you know."

"But, good heaven, I'm not afraid," he remonstrated feebly.

"Of course you're not, but can say you are? It's quite simple sleep in the open air because your lungs so much good. Oh, know! It isn't necessary to your chest like that. They're perfectly sound, I daresay. I should you'd rather enjoy the fresh air sides, there isn't a room to be in the hotel."

"But suppose it should rain!" protested, knowing full well he was doomed.

"You poor boy, haven't you a brella?" she cried with such perfectly entrancing laugh that he have slept out in a hailstorm to wide recompense. And so it was that he was to sleep in the balcony just off the baby's luxury, the hotel people agreed, placed a cot there at night to without compunction, and they've been known to hobnob with royalty. Mrs. Odell-Carney was a Lady Somebody-or-other before she married the second time. She's terribly smart, Roxbury."

"Well, it seems that Odell-Carney is promoting a new South African mining venture. I have it from Freddie Ulstervelt that he's trying to sell something like a million shares to Mr. Rodney, who has loads of money that came from real mines in the far west. He'd never be such a fool as to sink a million in South Africa, you know, but he's just clever enough to see the advantage of keeping Odell-Carney in tow, as it were. It means a great deal to Mrs. Rodney, don't you know, Roxbury, to be able to say that she foured with the Odell-Carneys. Freddie says that Cousin Alfred is talking in a very diplomatic manner of going to London in August to look fully into the matter. It is understood that the Rodneys are to be the guests of the Odell-Carneys while in London. It won't be the season, of course, so there won't be much of a commotion in the smart set. It is our dear Edith's desire to slip into the charmed circle through the rift that the Rodneys make. Do you comprehend?"

They were seated side by side in the corner of the compartment, his broad back screening her as much as possible from the persistent glances of Freddie Ulstervelt, who was nobly striving to confine his attentions to Katherine. Brock's eyes were devouring her exquisite face with a greediness that might have caused her some uneasiness if there had not been something pleasantly agreeable in his way of doing it.

"Yes—faintly," he replied after an almost imperceptible conflict between the senses of sight and hearing. "But how does she intend to explain me away? I'll be a dreadful skeleton in her closet if it comes to that. When she is obliged to produce the real Roxbury, what then?"

"She's thought it all out, Roxbury," said Constance severely, but almost inaudibly. "I'm sure Freddie heard part of what you said. Do be careful! She's going to reveal the whole plot to Mrs. Odell-Carney just as soon as Roxbury gives the word, treating it as very clever and necessary ruse, don't you see. Mrs. Odell-Carney will be implored to aid in the deception for a few days, and she'll consent, because she's really quite a bit of a sport. At the psychological moment the Rodneys will be told. That places Mrs. Odell-Carney in the position of being an abettor or accomplice. She's had the distinction of being a sharer in a most glorious piece of strategy. Don't you see how charmingly it will all work in the end?"

"What are you two whispering about?" demanded Freddie Ulstervelt noisily, patience coming to an end.

"What—the devil is that to?" began Brock furiously. Constance brought him up sharp with a warning kick on the ankle. He vowed afterward that he would carry the mark to his grave.

"He's telling me what a nice chap you are, Freddie," said she sweetly. Brock glared out of the window. Freddie sniffed scornfully.

"I'm getting sick of this job," growled Brock under his breath. "I didn't calculate on"—

"Now, Roxbury, dear, don't be a slack. 'By Jove, I'm glad she isn't my sister-in-law!"

"I suppose I'm expected to ask why," frigidly.

"Certainly. Because if she was I couldn't. Do you get the point?" He crossed his legs and looked insupportably sure of himself.

They reached Munich late in the afternoon and went at once to the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten, where they were to find the Odell-Carneys.

Mr. Odell-Carney was a middle aged Englishman of the extremely uninitiated type. He was tall and narrow and distant, far beyond what is commonly accepted as blase. Indeed, he was especially slow of speech, even for an Englishman, quite as if it were an everlasting question with him whether it was worth while to speak at all. One had the feeling when listening to Mr. Odell-Carney that he was being favored beyond words. It took him so long to say anything that if one were but moderately bright he could finish the sentence mentally some little time in advance of the speaker and thus be prepared to properly appreciate that which otherwise might have puzzled him considerably. It could not be said, however, that Mr. Odell-Carney was ponderous. He was merely the effectual result of delay. Perhaps it is safe to agree with those who knew him best; they maintained that Odell-Carney was a pose, nothing more.

His wife was quite the opposite in nearly every particular except height and angularity. She was bony and red faced and opinionated. A few shallow years, with a rapid, profligate nobleman had brought her, in widowhood, to a fine sense of appreciation of the slow going though tiresomely impractical men of the Odell-Carney type. It mattered little that he made poor investment of the money she had sequestered from his lordship. He had kept her in the foreground by associating himself with every big venture that interested the financial smart set. Notwithstanding the fact that he never was known to have any money, he was looked upon as a financier of the highest order, which is saying a great deal in these unfeeling days of pounds and shillings.

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney was dressed as all rangy, long limbed Englishwomen are prone to dress—after a model peculiarly not her own. She looked ridiculously ungraceful alongside the smart, chic American women, and yet not one of them but would have given her boots to be able to array herself as one of these. There was no denying the fact that Mrs. Odell-Carney was a "regular tip-topper," as Mr. Rodney was only too eager to say. She had the air of a born leader—that is to say, she could be gracious when occasion demanded, without being patronizing.

In due course of time the Medcrofts and Miss Fowler were presented to the distinguished couple. This function was necessarily delayed until Odell-Carney had time to go into the details of a particularly annoying episode of the afternoon. He was telling the story to his friend Rodney, and of course everything was at a standstill until he got through.

It seems that Mr. Odell-Carney felt the need of a nap at 3 o'clock. He gave strict injunctions that there was to be no noise in the halls while he slept and then went into his room and stretched out. Any one who has stopped at the Hotel Four Seasons will have no difficulty in recalling the elec-

Unmistakably handsome Fowler sisters. His expressive "chawmed" was in direct contrast to his ordinary manner of acknowledging an introduction.

"Mr. Medcroft is the famous architect, you know," explained the envious Mrs. Rodney.

"Oh, yes, I know," drawled Mr. Odell-Carney. "You American architects are doing great things, 'pon my soul," he added luminously. Brock stuck his eyeglass in tighter and hemmed with raucous precision Mrs. Medcroft stiffened perceptibly.

"Oh, but he's Roxbury Medcroft, the great English architect!" cried Mrs. Rodney in some little confusion. Odell-Carney suddenly remembered. He glared hard at Brock. The Rodneys saw signs of disaster.

"Oh, by Jove! Are you the fellow who put those new windows in the Chaucer Memorial hall? 'Pon me soul! Are you the man who did that?" There was no mistaking his manner. He was distinctly annoyed.

Brock faced the storm coolly for his friend Medcroft's sake. "I am Roxbury Medcroft, if that's what you mean, Mr. Odell-Carney."

"I know you're Medcroft, but, hang it all, wot I asked was, did you design those windows? 'Gad, sir, they're the laughing sensation of the age. Where the devil did you get such ideas—eh, wot?" His wife had calmly, diplomatically intervened.

"I hate that man," said Mrs. Medcroft to her supposed husband a few minutes later. There was a dangerous red in her cheeks, and she was breathing quickly. Brock gave an embarrassed laugh and mentioned something audibly about a "stupid ass."

The entire party left on the following day for Innsbruck, where Mr. Rodney already had reserved the better part of a whole floor for himself and guests. Mr. Odell-Carney, before they left Munich, brought himself to the point of apologizing to Brock for his peppery remarks.

He was very sorry and all that, and he hoped they'd be friends; but the windows were atrocious, there was no getting around that. His wife smoothed it over with Edith by confiding to her the lamentable truth that poor Odell-Carney hadn't the remotest idea what he was talking about half of the time. After carefully looking Edith over and finding her valuably bright and attractive she cordially expressed the hope that she would come to see her in London.

"We must know each other better, my dear Mrs. Medcroft," she had said unabashedly. Edith thought of the famous drawing rooms in Mayfair and exulted vastly. "And Mr. Medcroft too. I am so interested in men who have loomed.

"You poor boy, haven't you? Well," she cried with such perfectly entrancing laugh that he have slept out in a hailstorm of wide recompense. And so it was told that he was to sleep in the balcony just off the baby's luncheon room, the hotel people agree place a cot there at night in order to oblige the unfortunate guest with affected lung.

"You are so dear and so agreeable, Roxbury," purred Mrs. Medcroft much relieved. "If ever I hear a girl looking for a nice husband, I'll recommend you."

"It's all very nice," said he with a grin, "but I'm hanged if I'm to be expected to remember all accomplishments." They were in her room, attended by the French maid, Constance. "First, then, the English language which I find I'm most unfamiliar with, then a deafness in one of my ears which I can't remember which until late, and now I'm to be a tub. You've no idea how hard it is to speak English against Odell-Carney. I'm an out and out amateur. And it's horribly annoying to have Ulstervelt shouting in the room enough for everybody in the room to hear. It's rich, I tell you, and if I didn't love you so devotedly, I'd be on my way at the instant. There! I feel better. My way is the first American I've had in the farce since we left Germany."

"And, by the way, Edith, I'm I'll have to punch Odell-Carney's founded head before long. Having to be so friendly to me and bury Medcroft that I can't end as Brock."

"I—I don't understand," murmured Edith plaintively. Constance up with a new interest in her sprightly face.

"Well, you see, he's working to square himself with Medcroft. The break he made about the windows that he's taking his spite out on American architects. Confound him, he persists in saying I'm all right. God deliver him from those duffers, the American builder says he wouldn't let one of us in a hen coop for him, much less in a kennel. Oh, I say, Connie, don't you like it?"—Brock and Edith were laughing at him as he joined them at once. Constance and O'Brien, who had come in, were smiling discreetly.

"Come, Roxbury, what do you say to a good long walk?" cried Constance. "I must talk to you seriously about a great many things, beginning with your egotism." He set forth with a rejoicing in spite of his numerous limitations.

Upon their return from the moonlit stroll along the mountain path, Constance went at once to her room to dress for dinner. Brock, more deeply than ever before, lighted a cigarette and seated himself in the gallery, only retrospection in his meditation was sorely disturbed by her constant allusion to Freddie Ulstervelt and his "amazingly attractive" face. Was it possible that she could be so in love with that insignificant whippet snapper? He seemed propounding this doleful question in the lofty, sphinxlike Walpurgis, looming dark in the path of the south.

"Hello!" exclaimed a voice

his ear—the fresh, confident voice that he knew so well. "I've been looking for you everywhere." Freddie drew up a chair and sat down at his "good side." The young man appeared to have something weighty on his mind. Brock shifted uneasily. "I want to put it up to you, Mr. Medcroft, as man to man. You are Connie's brother-in-law and you ought to be able to set me straight."

"Ah, I see," said Brock vaguely. "You do?" queried the other, surprise and doubt in his face.

"No, I should say I don't, don't you see," substituted Brock.

"I was wondering how you could have seen. It's a matter I haven't discussed with any one. I've come to have a liking for you, Roxbury. You're my sort; you have a sort of New York feeling about you. I'm sure you're enough of a sport to give me unprejudiced advice. Hands across the sea, see? Well, to get right down to the point, old man—you'll pardon my plain speech—I think Constance ought to marry an American."

Brock sat up very straight. "I think that's—that's a matter for Miss Fowler to determine," he said coldly.

"You don't quite get my meaning," persisted Freddie, crossing his legs comfortably. "I was trying to make it easy for myself."

"You mean, you think she ought to marry you."

"That's it, precisely. How clever you are."

"But you are said to be engaged to Miss Rodney," ventured Brock, feeling his way.

"That's just the point, Mr. Medcroft. We're not really engaged—but almost. As a matter of fact, we've got to the point where it's really up to me to speak to her father about it, don't you know. Luckily I haven't."

"Luckily?"

"Yes; that would have committed me, don't you see. I've been tentatively engaged more than a dozen times, but never quite up to the girl's father. Now, I don't mind telling you that I've changed my mind about Katherine. She's a jolly good sort, but she's not just my sort. I thought she was, but—well, you know how it is yourself. The heart's a d-d queer organ. Mine has gone back to Constance in the last two days. You are her brother-in-law, and you're a good fellow through and through. I want your help. I've got money to burn, and the family's got position in the States. I can take care of her as she should be taken care of. No little old six room flat for her. But, of course, you understand, I can't quite carry the thing through with Katherine still feeling herself attached, as it were. The thing to decide is this: How best can I let Katherine down easily and take on Connie without putting myself in a rather hazardous position? I'm a gentleman, you see, and I can't do anything downright rotten. It wouldn't do. I'm sure in her heart Connie cares for me. I could make her understand me better if I had half the chance. But a fellow can't get near her nowadays. Don't you think you are carrying the family link too far? Now, what I want to ask of you as a friend is this: Will you put in a good word for me every chance you get? I'll square myself with Katherine all right. Of course, you'll understand, I don't want to actually break with Katherine until I'm reasonably sure of Constance. I'm a guest of the Rodney this matter. It will simplify things immensely. You'll speak a good word for me when the time comes, now, won't you?"

"You want me to do you a good turn," said Brock slowly. He found himself grinning with a malicious joy. "All right, I'll see to it that Miss Rodney doesn't marry you, my boy. I'll attend to her."

"Just a minute," interrupted Freddie quickly. "Don't be too hasty about that. I want to be sure of Constance first."

"I see. I was just about to add that I'll give Constance a strong hint that one of the most gallant young sparks in New York is likely to propose to her before the end of the week. That will!"

"Heavens!" exclaimed Freddie in disgust. "You needn't do that. I've already proposed to her five or six times."

"And she—she is undecided?" cried Brock, his eyes darkening.

"No, bang it all, she's not undecided. She's said no every time. That's why I'm up a tree, so to speak."

"Oh!" was all that Brock said. Of course she couldn't love a creature of Freddie's stamp! He gloated.

"Gad, you're a lucky dog, Roxbury," went on Freddie enviously. "Money isn't everything. You're married to one of the prettiest and most fascinating women in the world. She's a wonder. You can't blame me for wanting your wife as a sister-in-law. Now, can you? And that kid! You lucky dog!"

Floors castle, home of the Duke of Roxburghe, was the scene of a curious psychical mystery over a century ago. Sir Walter Scott relates the incident. John, third Duke of Roxburghe, who died in 1804, the celebrated book collector, when arranging his library employed neither a secretary nor a librarian, but a footman called Archie, who knew every book as a shepherd does each sheep of his flock. There was a bell hung in the duke's room at Floors which was used on no occasion except to call Archie to his study. The duke died in St. James' square at a time when Archie was himself sinking under a mortal complaint. On the day of the funeral the library bell suddenly rang violently. The dying Archie sat up in bed and faltered, "Yes, my lord duke, yes, I will wait on your grace instantly." And with these words on his lips he fell back in bed and died.—St. James' Gazette.

Now, look at our pictures. In the first Mother Turkey had her choice. She hunted and twittered around a long time before she found a place to suit her—a big, leafy brush heap in the woods.

She knew that minks and weasels and skunks would be nosing around, and the sharp eyed hawk and crow and the fiery eyed, velvet feathered owl would be after her and her speckled eggs, and she didn't want humans around to bugle the job either, and not till she hatched was her nest found and the brush, torn away, revealed her leafy retreat.

That's grand, true, natural nesting, that is! She sat there in perfect comfort for four weeks, dreaming of the pretty bird babies to come. The old

Who Is It?

Any number of persons may play the game called "Who is it?" One is selected to stand or sit in front of the others, who have arranged themselves in a half circle. The one selected sits with his back to the rest; then one of those in the half circle touches the chosen one on the back, and all together they ask, "Who is it?" The one on the centre then turns around and tells the name of the one he thinks touched him. The one named asks, "Where shall I go?" The chosen one designates a place at some distance, so that while the person named is going to the place and back the rest will have a good chance to hide. If the person named did touch the one in the centre he must go, but if he was not the one then he says to the leader, "Go yourself," and he is the one to go. The last person caught stands in front as the chosen one in the next game.

"I am a cabbage grower. I haul my produce to the sauerkraut factory at South Seattle. Before the road over which I travel was built, I had to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning to start on my journey. The limit of the load I could haul with a team of 1800 pound horses was 2500 pounds, and after visiting the factory I would arrive back at my home late in the evening. But look at the difference now that a permanent hard surface has been laid down. I start on my trip about 8 o'clock and need only a team weighing 1400 pounds to haul a load of 5000 pounds of cabbage, which is double my previous capacity. And, best of all, I find on my return to the house early in the afternoon, that I have finished the day's work without the horses having turned a hair."

Concrete Roads Mean Road Economy

They prevent your road taxes being spent in patching up roads that never will be good roads.

They are the cheapest kind of roads at the end of ten, fifteen or twenty years because they practically eliminate the cost of upkeep. They enable you to haul bigger loads with less effort and less wear and tear on horses and vehicles. They increase land values, better conditions generally, and decrease the cost of living.

Write for, free, Good Roads literature, and learn how good roads will benefit you.

fectly clean nest, the natural moisture from the ground kept her eggs from drying out and the thick, leafy canopy overhead gave perfect protection from sun and rain.

No wonder poults hatched in such lovely environment are the best, but look at the barrel. How would you like to sit in a barrel on a hot scorching day? Think of Mother Turkey sitting in there for a whole month.

Do you suppose eggs hatch such good poults in a dry, dusty barrel as they do in nature's way? Can Mother Turkey change her position when she gets tired and turn and cool her eggs in such an uncomfortable place without breaking her eggs?

And the bugs. Don't such barrels get bughouse quick, especially when used for several hatches in succession as they often are?

Yes, everybody must 'fess that it's best for Mother Turkey to choose her own nest. All a human need do is to free her from lice before she nests and keep some feed handy to her retreat and water if there is not a chattering brook purring by.

DON'TS.

Don't grow old ungracefully and may your last days be your best days.

Don't grow weary in well doing, but don't do the editor for what is due.

Don't let sentiment influence you to keep show birds that are past paying.

The majority of new models are

One of these has a brim of very fine

There is a jet ornament on either side

DRYSDALE, ONT., June 15th. 1913

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using
"Fruit-a-tives", I recommend them strongly to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to inflammation of the brain but I took "Fruit-a-tives" steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives" and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness."

For Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheuma-

Fishing Extraordinary.

Dr. Heaslip, of Picton, whose automobile sank through the ice near there a few days ago, is again rejoicing in the possession of his property. The accident happened on the return journey from Adolphustown, about one hundred yards from the shore, and in forty three feet of water. The doctor's escape was a narrow one. Feeling the ice to be collapsing under the front wheels of the car, he shouted to his companion, Mr. Osborne, to jump. The doctor followed quickly, but was precipitated into the water. His companion rescued him, while the auto sank—by the bow. On Saturday the rescue party, under John D. Culliton, located the spot where the accident had taken place, and after taking a sounding and adjusting the grappling iron the automobile was brought to the surface, five minutes after the first "bite." Then a stout cable was fixed to the automobile, and with the aid of a tree, a pulley and a team, the catch was landed. Some of the cushions and one of the lamps were missing, while the windshield was cracked and the top damaged. The damage was estimated at about $150. While the Bay of Quinte is noted for its fish, we believe that this is the biggest catch yet made in this district.—Whig.

litt, contested the will and after the evidence for the Plaintiffs side was

and Sidney G. Heaslitt gets the farm,

GUARANTEED RELIEF FROM ALL BOWEL ILLS.

If your bowels are out of order,
instead of using harsh salts or other
physic, take a Rexall Orderlie to-night
and to-morrow you will feel great.
They taste good and act so easily that there isn't a particle griping or purging, nor the excessive looseness that follows the taking of salts and most pills. They soothe and strengthen the bowels, promptly relieving the constipation, making it unlikely to occur
again.

We don't believe there is any other
bowel remedy anywhere near as good
and at the same time so easy and pleasant to take as Rexall Orderlies.
We know you will agree with us and believe you will thank us for telling you about them. If they don't satisfy you in every way, come back and tell us and we will give your money without a word or question. You have no reason to hesitate when we give you
the opportunity, as we hereby do, to try them at our risk. In vest pocket tin boxes: 10c, 25c, 50c.

You can buy Rexall Orderlies only
at The Rexall Stores and in this town
only of us. Wallace's Drug Store, Limited.

Ask the milk-drawer about our milk-cans, and he will tell you that they are the best on the waggon. All sizes, and we have a good stock on hand, but they won't last long. M. S.
Madole.

The provincial secretary declines to say what the local government intends
